SO MUCH TO LOSE

TO most people who follow the international situation, the Chinese moves against the Indian border are stark madness, devoid of reason, explanation or justification. As Mr. Nehru told Parliament it makes little difference whether a mile or two of wild, uninhabitable mountain belongs to China or India and there is no possible reason which can be called sane why the Chinese should want to begin suddenly shooting it out with the Indians to assert their claims.

Had there been abortive negotiations as a prelude to the incidents of the last few days, the Chinese action would be a little easier to understand. But although the frontier has been in dispute for years, not only have there been no political negotiations, but no call from Peking for such a conference. And on top of that India is supposed to be China's best friend outside of the Communist bloc.

The Irony

BY this premeditated act of folly China stands to lose so much not only in her relations with the country that has taken the leading role in trying to secure for her a seat in the United Nations, but in her relations with Asia generally.

The irony of the situation lies in the fact that Mr. Khrushchev is about to take off on a peace mission to America. President Eisenhower would do well to ask whether peace has any meaning in the Communist bloc when a country like China turns around and snubs her best friend in the back. Where is the basis of trust if the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence are suddenly and inexplicably shot to shreds in one burst of fire?

Embarrassing?

IS Mao Tse-tung trying to embarrass his Soviet ally on the eve of his visit to America? If so, could he not have done this with much less damage to his own alliances by firing his guns in other directions? Perplexed observers all over Asia are asking just what sense is there in squandering ten years of fruitful friendship?

And since China has refused to give an explanation for her extraordinary action, perhaps Asians can assume that Peking really cares for no one and is out only to assert her authority over, and show her contempt for, her weaker neighbors. In that event, China will have only herself to blame if she finds herself cold-shouldered and ostracized by those countries who once looked to her achievements with respect and admiration.

Chivalry—A Lost Cause

BUDGET BENEFITS NOT BEING PASSED TO PUBLIC

Survey Shows
Some Importers
Still Selling At Former Prices

By A CHINA MAIL REPORTER

The prices of a number of cosmetics, soaps, toilet and shaving creams and proprietary medicines have not come down in price despite the abolition of duty in the budget six months ago. I learn on reliable authority this morning.

And during a recent authoritative survey, retailers claimed that some agents and importers are using the money they formerly paid in duty on advertising.

The survey was made after a number of residents had complained about prices not coming down.

Retailers also claim that importers and suppliers are giving as their reason for not reducing prices that they are still holding old stock on which duty has been paid.

But authoritative observers are not inclined to believe this. They say that formerly most agents took out of bond just enough stock for their immediate needs, paid duty on that and left the rest in bond.

Rarely did they take out more than three or four months' stock. When the duty was lifted, automatically all supplies still in bond were exempted from duty. But an authoritative survey on August 19 shows this:

In the case of three well-known proprietary medicines, the managers of five medicine companies said that price reductions had been made on about 70 per cent of these articles since the duty had been lifted.

Survey

In the case of cosmetics and toilet preparations, a survey was carried out among five well-known retailers on August 19. The managers of these stores said that in the case of a selection of three items, about 60 per cent had been reduced in price and that the reduction amounted to 10 or 12 per cent.

They said that some prices had even risen. This was because there had been an increase in the FOB prices since the duty had been lifted.

An observer said there was a possibility that in an attempt to beat sole agents who were not reducing prices, other importers might import from Singapore or other nearby ports at lower prices and so force a reduction in prices.

When the Financial Secretary, Mr. A. G. Clarke, announced the abolition of the duty he said it would help people of the lower income group and produce a fall in household bills for these items.

Some Effect

The cuts did have some immediate effect and a brand of British toothpaste fell from $3.50 to $2.50 and a well-known hair tonic from $9 to $7.

When duty on toilet preparations was first imposed in May, 1941, it was a 10 per cent tax on the local retail price. In December 1947 this basis was changed to 25 per cent of the FOB price in the case of the imported goods and of the ex-factory price in the case of local products.

But when the duty was abolished it was pointed out that Hongkong would not feel the full 25 per cent effect, because the duty was on FOB prices without freight and insurance and both the importers and retailers profits.

THIRD DEATH

Meanwhile a France-Press report from Phnom Penh states that one of the men wounded in yesterday's bombing attempt on Cambodia's Royal rulers died today bringing to three the number of dead.

The dead are Prince Vakrivan and two servants. Another servant was reported in a serious condition.

Police reportedly discovered a number of clues which have led them to seek the Cambodian terrorist Ixong Emigres affiliated with the "Free Cambodian Committee."

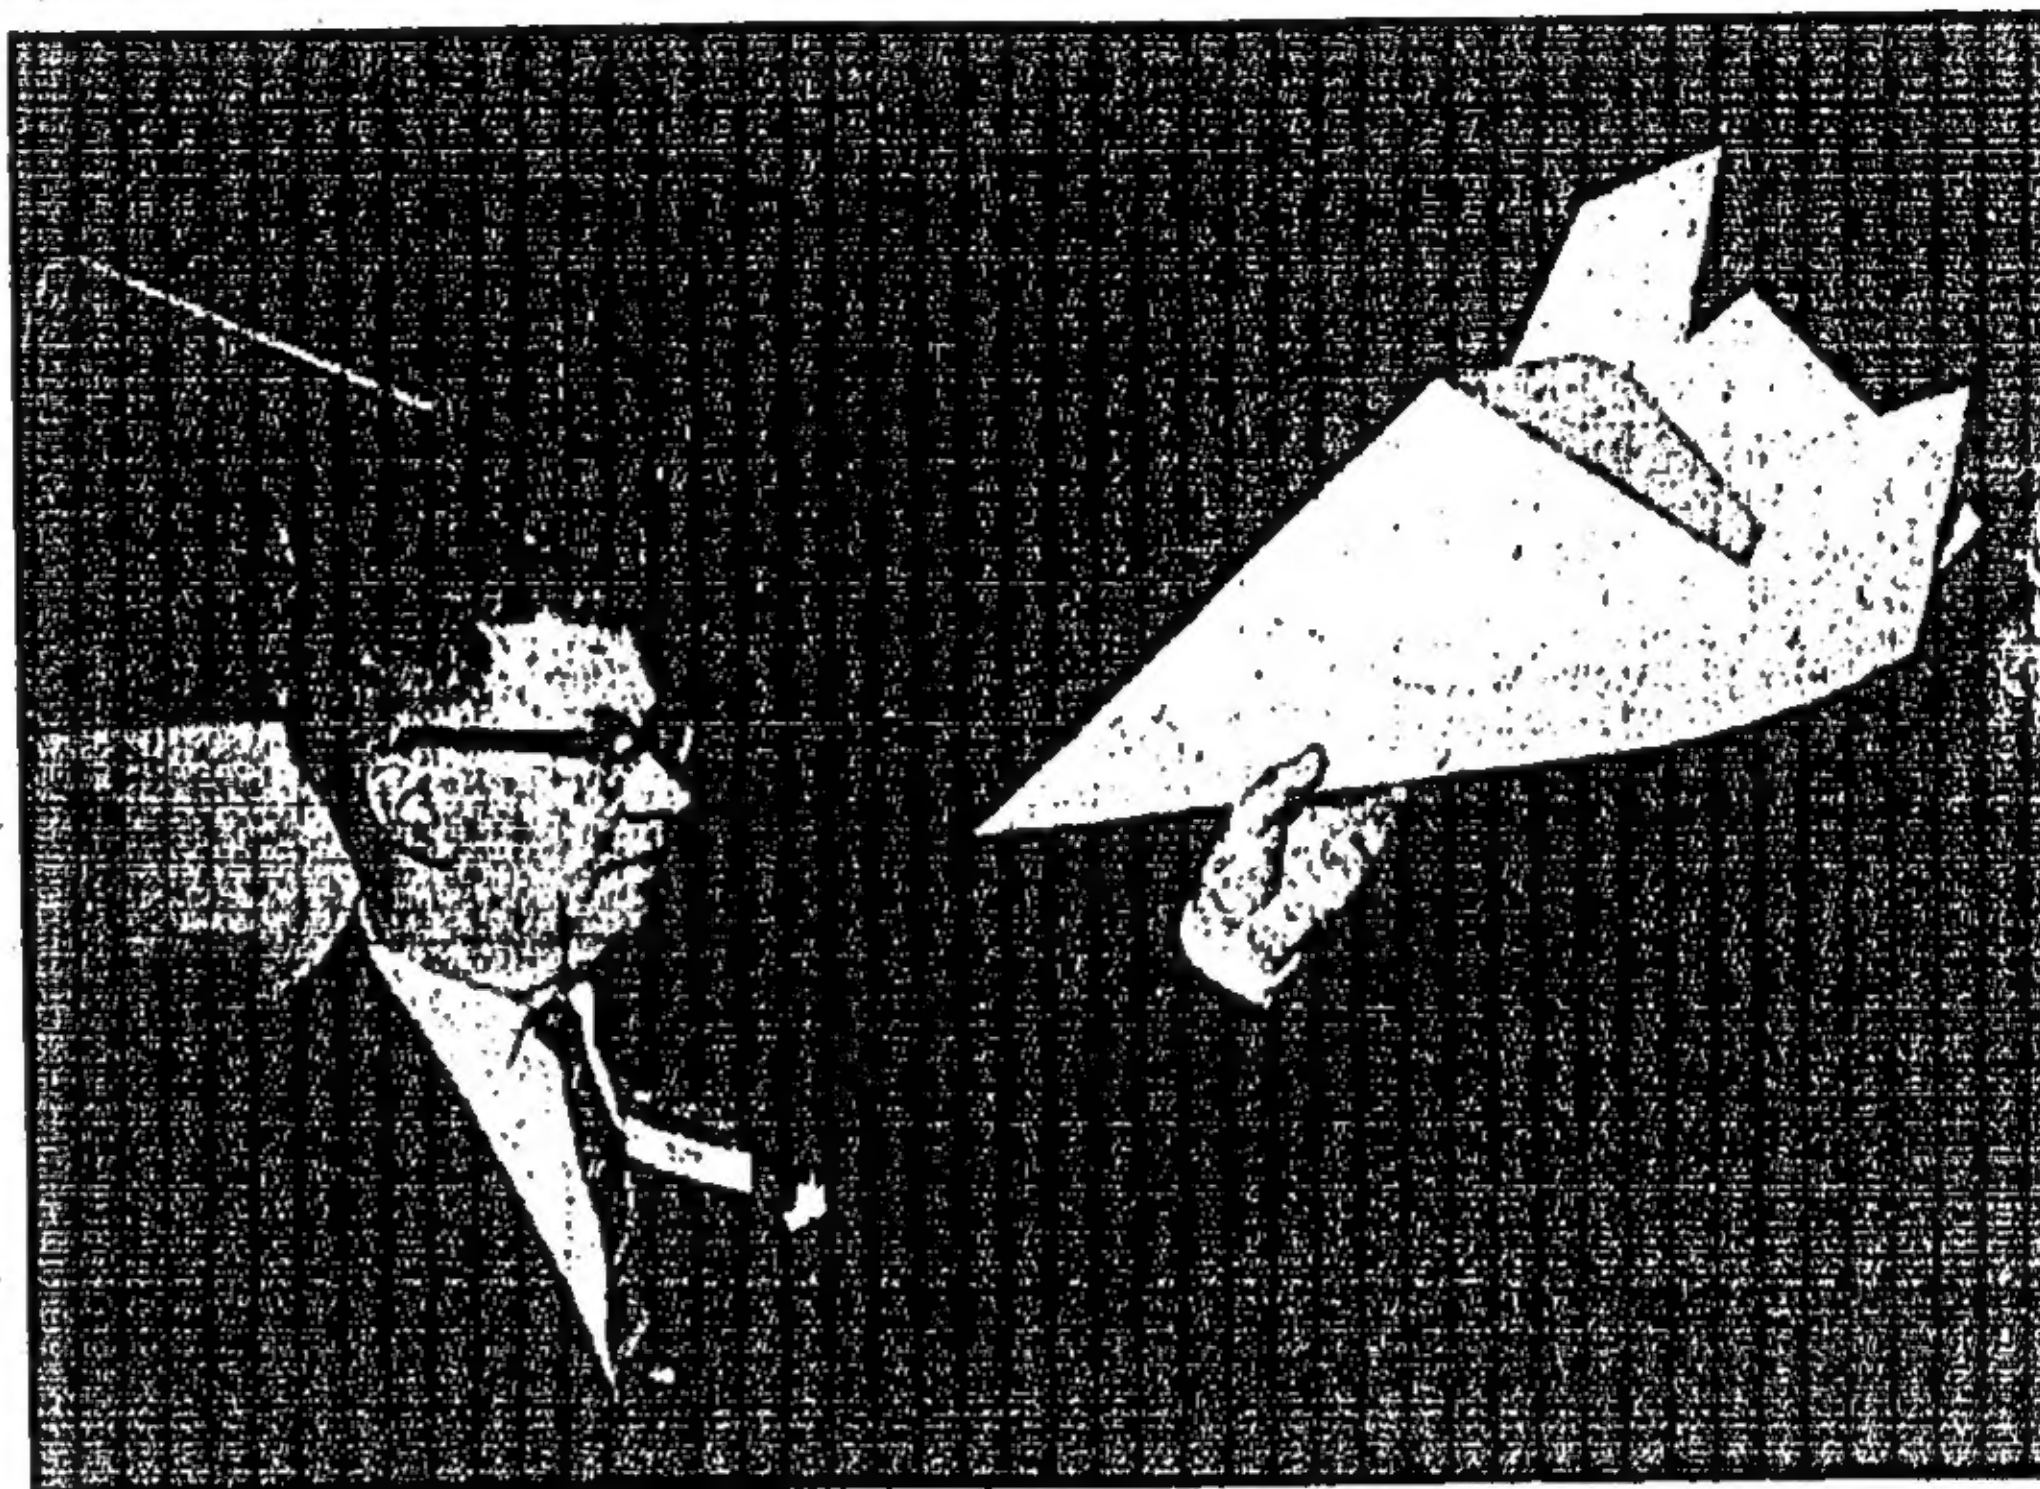

Magistrates Court, his intervention cost the man $9. For the two men were plain clothes policemen making the first arrest in Oxford under the new Street Offences Act, aimed at driving prostitution off the streets.

He was fined $7 for assaulting one of the policemen in the execution of his duty and $2 for obstructing the policeman. He pleaded not guilty and told the court he thought the men were "getting fresh" with the girl.

The girl, who pleaded guilty to loitering for the purpose of prostitution, was fined $5.—Reuter.

Britain's Future Spaceship

A British design for a manned satellite was recently revealed at the Commonwealth Space Congress in London. The satellite would take two men into space and bring them back safely to earth. Picture shows Dr. W. F. Hilton, the designer, holding a model of the satellite.—The Times Photo.

'Ike' And 'Monty'
End Feud At Reunion Dinner

London, Sept. 1.

President Eisenhower and the men who helped him lead the Allied armies to victory in the war that began 20 years ago today met in a reunion tonight to cement old friendships and heal new feuds.

The President was host to Sir Winston Churchill and 25 British generals and admirals who fought with him during World War II.

Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Alamein, a severe post-war critic of the President's wartime leadership, was one of the first guests to arrive.

"Monty" who complained that the President did not return his Christmas card greetings, marched into the reception room with an outstretched hand to greet the President.

Veterans

Another critic of the President, Field Marshal Viscount Alanbrooke, was among the group of men who still carry the military trim figures of the war years.

Before the group emerged for pictures, the babble of voices could be heard coming from the room where the President stood to greet his guests.

"Glad to see you after all these years," the President was heard to say several times.

The dinner was held in Windsor House, official residence of U.S. Ambassador, Mr. John Hay Whitney.

The President was flanked by Sir Winston Churchill and Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Alamein in the U.S. Embassy's Blue Room as he led the reminiscing.

They recalled their victories over cigars and brandy after the dinner.

The President and his guests remained in a paneled room for half an hour drinking cocktails before they emerged for photographs.

Ike And Winnie

The President came out first with Sir Winston's arm on his Montgomery remained well back in the group although he soon moved forward to stand near Sir Winston's shoulder.

When the photographers were through, the President was heard to remark about Sir Winston: "He's a fine old fellow."

President Eisenhower also invited many of his wartime civilian, political and judicial advisers.

War-time Foreign Minister and later Premier, Sir Anthony Eden refused the invitation on the advice of his doctors.

Sir Winston was the first guest to leave. He was escorted to the porch of the embassy by the President and the U.S. Ambassador, John Hay Whitney, who helped him into his coat.

And the feud looked as good as healed.—UPI.

Atom War
Not Army's
Main Role

London, Sept. 1.

Britain's Chief of the Imperial General Staff, General Sir Francis Festing, said today that it was extremely doubtful if any war the British Army was likely to fight in the foreseeable future would be a nuclear war.

General Festing told a press conference that it was wrong, as many people seemed to think, to say that the army's primary role was for nuclear warfare.

The British Army had appeared in action on eight different fronts since 1945 but none had involved nuclear war, the General said.

One of the lessons learned during the last year was the importance of strategic mobility. That meant air mobility without which it would be hard for the army "to do its stuff."

TROOPSHIPS

General Festing thought that troopships would decrease in importance. There would still be places where a troopship would be needed but an amphibian lift would be needed in a limited war such as that in Korea.

The vertical take-off aircraft was most valuable but it was "terribly expensive" to provide and to maintain because of its complexity.

Sir Francis said that recruiting for the army was "going pretty well."—Reuter.

London, Sept. 1.

A front-page cartoon in today's Evening News showed a waiter and a cook below a poster reading: "Ike's dinner for old war-time colleagues."

Lightning
Explodes
Oil Tank

Ohio, Sept. 1.

A huge 100,000-gallon crude oil tank on the outskirts of Lima exploded tonight after being struck by lightning, sending flames and heavy black smoke hundreds of feet into the air.

The tank exploded during a severe thunderstorm that flooded streets and several buildings in the city.

The explosion, which spewed flames 800 to 1,000 feet into the air, filled the depressed area surrounding the tank with flaming crude oil.

No injuries were reported.—UPI.

U.S. Millionaire

New York, Sept. 1.

Another Scandinavian working girl has married a young American oil millionaire.

Inga Lucia Ritzell, a tall, slim 28-year-old blonde from Nykoping, Sweden, was married today to Paul Jalmar Perella Ramos, also 28.

The wedding came less than two weeks after all her eleven previous marriages.

Ramos, a Norwegian girl who had worked for the Rockefeller family as a maid, Ramon, like the young Rockefeller, owes his wealth to the operations of Standard Oil Company. He is the great-grandson of Henry Huddleston

One Too Many In Space

London, Sept. 1.

The Soviet Union may have carried out an important space experiment about mid-August, delegates to the Astronautical Conference currently taking place here said today.

The supposition was based on the fact that an unidentified object had been discovered in outer space, the delegates said.

Since the object could not be identified, many theories have been put forward as to its nature. Well-informed circles presumed it was of Soviet origin and that it had been launched into space in mid-August.

The Western world's observation and tracking stations network was on an alert footing between August 7 and August 14 when three American satellites were launched. Then the scientists counted the number of man-made bodies revolving in space, they found one too many.—AFP.

Seven Killed In Second Day Of Calcutta Rioting

Calcutta, Sept. 1.

At least seven people were killed and forty sent to hospital with bullet wounds after Calcutta police opened fire tonight on crowds which held the city under mob rule.

No official casualty figures were yet available, and it was feared that more persons might be lying dead or wounded on the city's streets.

The police action appeared to have quelled the disturbances, which had grown in size and violence since the police made a baton charge on a crowd of some 20,000 demonstrators yesterday.

Police pickets had been withdrawn from many spots in north Calcutta because of heavy stone-throwing by demonstrators. Several incidents were also reported in south Calcutta.—AFP and Reuter.

Pavement
'Owner'
Protests

London, Sept. 1.

The man who tried to fight city laws and called a patch of pavement his own, protested again today when someone paid his fine.

Louis Goldberg, 53, was "enjoying the fresh air" on the pavement near his home three weeks ago when a policeman told him to "move along."

Goldberg protested that "you can't do this to me" and refused to move. He was arrested. In court, however, the Magistrate, Leo Grandwell, said that technically Goldberg was not within his rights.

"The law says you only have the right to walk up and down," he said, not stand in one place. He fined Goldberg £2 and £1 costs.

REFUSED

Goldberg refused to pay, and went to wait for someone to arrest him again.

"I am ready to go to gaol for freedom any time," he said. "Again and again if necessary."

Today, however, he was identified and walked into the court where the fine was imposed and paid it.

Goldberg objected again. "They can't do this," he said. "I will not accept charity. It's a matter of principle."—UPI.

Obstructed
By Waiting
For A Bus

London, Sept. 1.

A Londoner who broke the law by waiting for a bus went to court yesterday.

William Fraser Grant, 37, was waiting for a bus in Camden Town, north London, but declined to join the queue at the bus stop.

Police told him to move on. He refused, and was arrested. Yesterday, Grant appeared in court charged with obstructing the footway and was fined 2s 6d. He pleaded not guilty.

The Magistrate told him: "There appears to be some confusion as to what your rights really are. If you want to stand around for a bus you must stand in the proper place."—China Mail Special.

THE LOCAL SLANT

By Elizabeth Fox

She's The Most Sophisticated Artiste In Town

It was cabaret time in one of the Kowloon nightclubs. The lights went up and the chatter hushed and into the spotlight on the dancefloor swept Gery Scott who was to entertain us for the next 25 minutes. And entertain us she most certainly did.

Dressed in a tightly-fitting flame-coloured brocade frock with a big net astail, she woke everyone up with a bang and after five minutes of her dynamic singing faces were twice as cheerful.

With a decided twinkle in her eye and accompanied by Igo Fischer at the piano, Gery put over a number of nice-but-naughty songs of the Noel Coward type, and gales of laughter from the audience who quickly caught on to the mood of this vivacious personality.

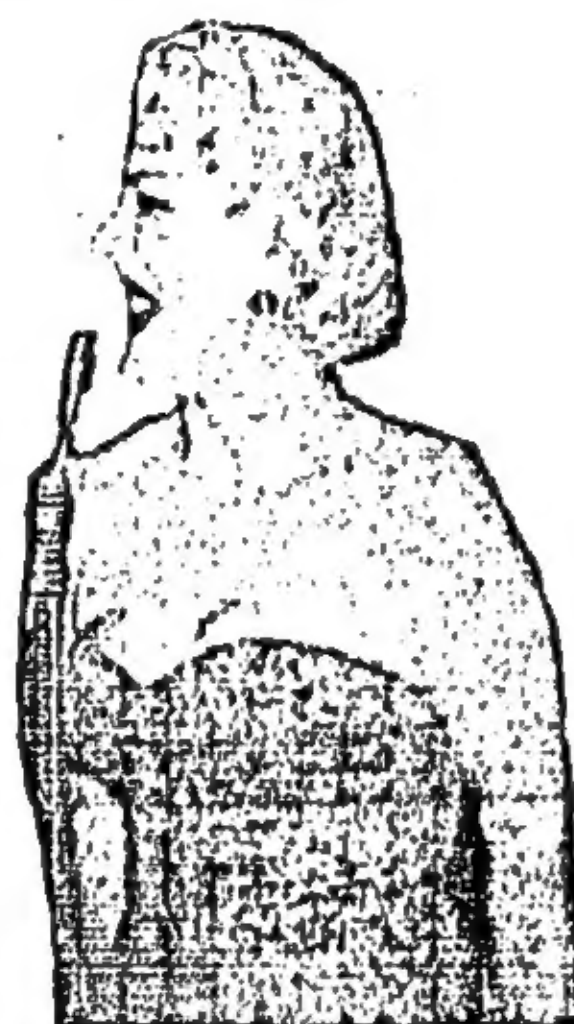

GREAT TALENT

Miss Scott is one of the best cabaret artistes to have appeared in the Colony for many months and she's undoubtedly the most sophisticated with a great deal of talent including a good singing voice.

Earlier on in the day we'd had tea together and I found Miss Scott a natural and friendly person.

With her rather exotic pink-blond hair and very lovely bright blue eyes, Gery told me that she'd started singing professionally in 1945 as a band singer, under such leaders as Nat Temple, Harry Roy, Vic Lewis and Harry Gold. "It was while working with a band in Germany that

I met Igo Fischer and we decided to team up," explained Gery, "and we've been together ever since doing the same sort of act."

GERY SCOTT

Charming Igo with his crew-cut looks like an American but is in fact German and hails from Munich. He sat at the next door table during tea and it was about half an hour before he came over and joined us as he said he was terrified of reporters—especially female ones, he said.

BORN IN INDIA

Gery was born in India where her father was in the Government. Educated in England she travelled backwards and forwards many times between Europe and the Middle East. Her parents never approved of her career and were always very much against it.

"But I wouldn't change 'it,'" she said. "Like everyone else doing other jobs I get paid for mine but that's not all. I love doing it and would be heartbroken if I had to do anything else."

She designs all her own dresses for her act and buys the material and has them made up wherever she happens to be at the time.

ENERGY

With three shows a night and each one different to suit that particular nightclub—Gery puts every ounce of energy into each act with the result that, "I'm absolutely finished at the end of the evening. I sleep during the day."

When she leaves Hong-kong, Gery is off to Formosa, Okinawa, Korea and Japan and she then hopes to go to America. "After that—well, I don't know. Having spent seven years in Germany I've grown very fond of it and one day hope to settle down in Wiesbaden."

When she and Igo left me they were off to see a doctor—Gery had bronchitis. "Oh, I shall still have to sing," she said with a smile, "four shows tonight as we're on T.V. as well." Anyone else would have retired to bed with the biggest bottle of cough mixture they could find long ago—but not Gery Scott.

That's show business for you, I guess.

Queen Victoria Made Preserved Ginger Popular In England

The story of ginger is an old and fascinating one. It all began with a food hawker who sold sweetmeats in the streets of Canton. He suddenly had the idea of preserving ginger and presenting it to the people in a new form.

In the days when Queen Victoria was still a young girl, Ly Chi the hawker risked some of his capital in his new idea and was pleased when it became a success. Preserved ginger was tasted by more and more people and eventually made its way across the seas to England. It proved popular and when Queen Victoria sampled it, pronounced that she liked it and ordered it to be served as a dessert at all future State banquets, ginger had really come to stay.

This was the ginger that one associates with lovely porcelain jars, but ginger in its raw state has a far more ancient beginning. The plant has been cultivated in China since the dawn of history.

CURIOSITY

The peoples living in the walled cities along the banks of the Yellow River were creative folk and skilled at producing appetising food. Out of curiosity

"When preserved ginger became so popular," he said, "many factories sprang up until they were all under selling each other to corner the market. The prices sank lower and lower until it was clear that something would have to be done to save the industry."

At that time Mr U Tai Chee was the managing partner of the Chi Loong factory which is the oldest one of them all, the one started by Ly Chi the sweet meat vendor. Mr U convinced the other factories that the answer to their problems was to form a syndicate and safeguard their mutual interests. This they did with great success.

Mr U showed me round the Chi Loong factory where the ginger is preserved by very simple processes.

In a huge open-floored building, Mr U led the way between Packing ginger in porcelain fancy jars.

they tried the rhizome of the ginger plant, Zingiber officinale, Roxburgh, to give it its Latin name, and they found that it imparted a delicious and unusual flavour to their cooking.

As time passed the cultivation of ginger became a profitable business and many plantations sprang up over the fertile country.

In the second century B.C. Su-ma Chieh, one of the great Chinese historians, wrote of the large estates of ginger and their wealthy owners rivaling the feudal lords.

INVASION

Hordes of Northern Nomads invaded the land in the 6th century A.D. and the scene was changed. Cities were destroyed and there were floods and famine. Deforestation and erosion played their part and it was not until a mass migration to the delta of the Pearl River around Canton that they were able to replant their ginger crop on suitable ground and the plantations once more flourished and prospered.

I went along to talk to Mr U Tai Chee who now controls the Hongkong Preserved Ginger Distributors.

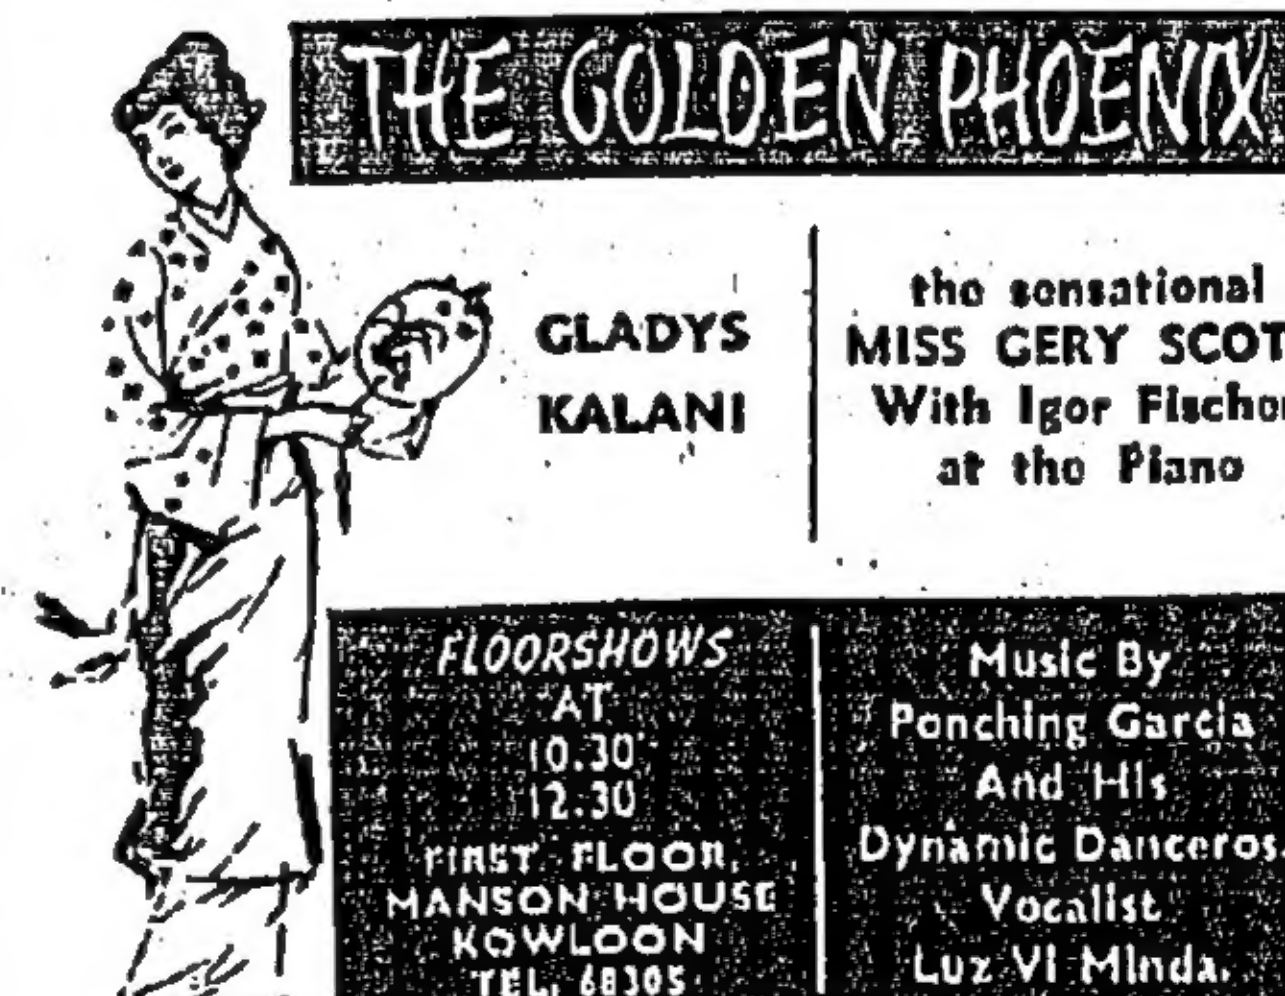

enormous vats and wooden tubs where the ginger lies soaking.

He explained that the rhizomes are first of all serped and shaped into various sizes and qualities and then soaked in brine. It's then washed with many changes of water and cooked by steam in large copper bowls. The workers, mainly women, squatting at a low table on the floor in their black clothing, punch the roots which look exactly like so many peeled potatoes, in order that the sugar can penetrate. Lastly comes a long bath in the sugar preserve and finally the ginger is packed into either wooden barrels for bulk cargo or else into the porcelain jars.

The jars themselves are made in Kiang Si in North China where porcelain has been made for hundreds of years.

After our little tour round the works, with the sharp incense smell of the ginger making us both cough and splutter, Mr U sat me down at a little marble-topped table set with pickle fories and little bowls of crystallized and wet ginger and cups of China tea.

So I had my first taste of what is one of the oldest and largest industries of Hongkong.

PRIEST SPOKE TO STATUE

Rome, Sept. 1. The unofficial Italian Catholic weekly, Orizzonti (Horizons), quoted Padre Pio di Pietralcina, 72-year-old Capuchin monk and "miracle-worker" as saying he felt suddenly cured from a long illness after speaking to the statue of the Madonna of Fatima, Portugal.

The statue has been carried through Italy by helicopter in recent months. It was taken on August 5 to the monastery at San Giovanni Rotondo, near Foggia, south Italy, where pilgrims flock to meet Padre Pio, who has borne the stigma of wounds of Christ for the past 40 years.

BECAME PALE

The weekly quoted Padre Pio, reported to have been suffering from pleurisy since April as suggested. "A few days ago while the Madonna of Fatima was leaving, I said: 'Madonna, you have come and found me ill. And now you are going away leaving me still ill.'"

"After saying this, I felt a chill on the back and became pale. Someone asked me: Padre, what has happened?"

"I feel cured since then," the Padre said.—China Mail Special.

Pullman Centenary

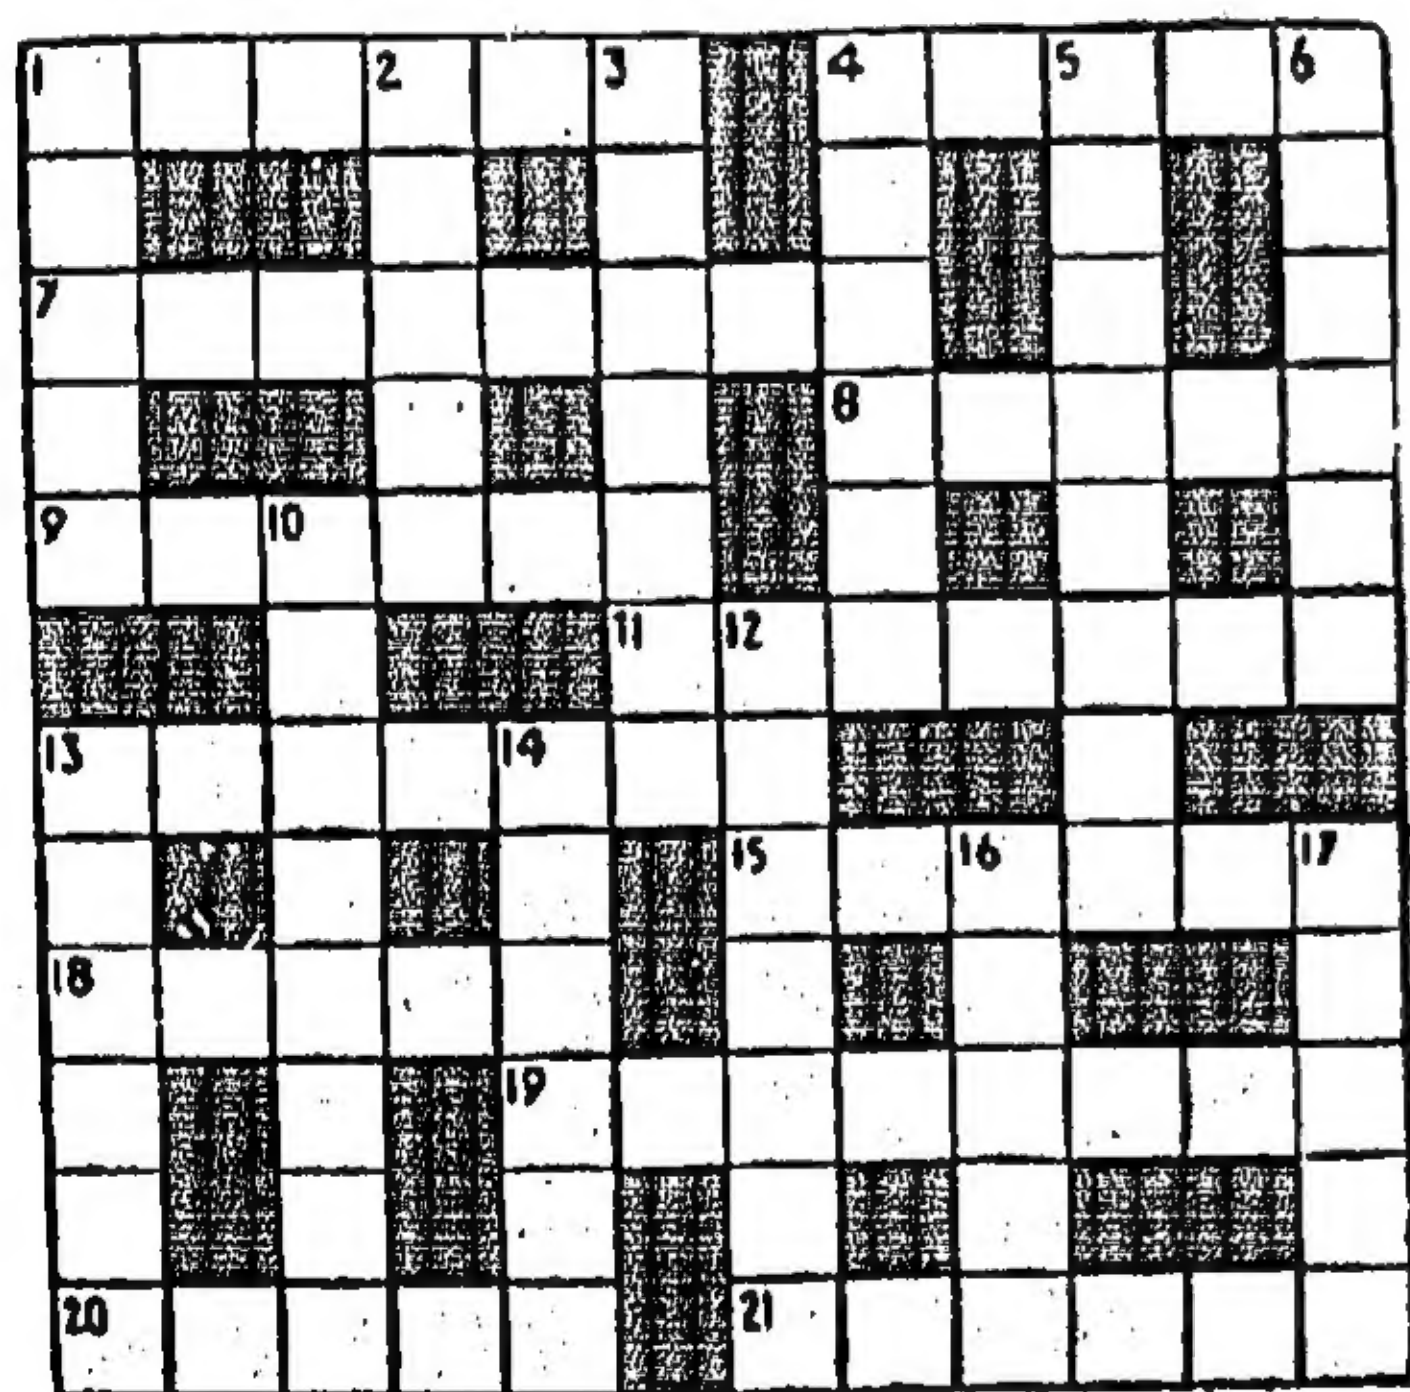

Bloomington, Ill., Sept. 1. One hundred years ago tonight a young man named George Pullman boarded his new creation—the first sleeping car. He travelled with them in the luxury coach, heated by wood stoves and lighted by candles. The passenger reported a very comfortable journey on the Chicago-bound night train of the Chicago and North Western.

Kashmir Road

Srinagar, Sept. 1. The Kashmir Government today sanctioned a million rupees (about £75,000) towards completing a "jeep" road between the Kashmir Valley and Leh, the capital of the border territory of Ladakh where the Chinese have made incursions recently. At present there is a gap of about 20 or 30 miles in the 200-mile road which is impassable even by jeeps. The funds are to complete the missing section.—Reuter.

China Warned Against Aggression

Eisenhower Should Visit Mao & Chou

Washington, Sept. 1. Mr M. C. Chagla, Indian Ambassador to the United States, today warned China against aggression towards India and then said he believed it would be useful for President Eisenhower to visit China.

Asked whether he thought such a trip should follow the President's Moscow visit later this year, he told National Press Club members: "I firmly think so. I think China would look upon it as a great tribute. If international tension can be reduced by his meeting Mr Khrushchev I do not see why it should not be reduced by his meeting Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai."

He said the Chinese would make a terrible mistake if they thought India would not fight to defend herself. "Our frontiers are sacred and we will defend them with all the power and resources that we possess," he said.

Perplexed

Asked for his personal views on the Chinese action on India's northern border he said: "I really am perplexed. It is really international war from the blue."

He felt "it may be that China feels she has been left out in the cold while the President and Mr Khrushchev are to have a tete-a-tete in this country."

"Perhaps this is to cause a diversion—I do not know." Asked whether in view of China's actions India still intended to sponsor Chinese admission to the United Nations, he replied: "My own view is that the worse that China behaves the greater the reason to have China a member of the United Nations." He said he wished that Americans appreciated this. As long as China was not a member, India could not be involved in China to the United Nations. He mentioned this as a case in point.

"I think that by keeping China outside the pale of society, you have made it possible for her to snap her fingers at the world," he said. As to India's support for China's admission, "I do not think that what China has done will cause us to change our view."

Do Some Good

The Ambassador was then asked "what makes you think that China if a member of the United Nations would be any more responsible to the United Nations than was the Soviet Union in the case of Hungary?"

He replied: "I am sure that Chinese presence at the council table would do some good—it could never do any harm."

"It is quite true that she might be impervious to the United Nations, but it is very difficult nowadays to resist decisions of the UN."

Mr Chagla agreed with a questioner that "as far as India is concerned this particular violation of our frontier is definitely a violation of the principle of co-existence."

He said if India had been a member of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organisation the Chinese border attacks would have been more, not less, likely.

If India were to join such a military pact "China would react," Mr Chagla said.

Asked whether India now had any interest in receiving military aid from the United States, he replied that the frontier penetrations were by only a few hundred men.

No Aid Needed

"There is not a movement of any serious scale... not an invasion," he said.

"I think we are in a position to defend ourselves and repel, resist any penetration of our frontiers... there is no need for any military aid at this point,"—Reuter.

Male Godiva

Miami, Fla., Sept. 1. A symphonic jury yesterday cleared Leroy Maroney, 18, of riding a bicycle while nude after he told them he couldn't help it. Maroney said "five or six" youths had jumped him and stolen his clothes shortly before officers saw him pedalling down the street naked at 3 a.m.—UPI.

DRESSING MISS UNIVERSE

Long Beach, Sept. 1. Contestants in a new international beauty congress to be held here next year are expected to appear in evening gowns, native costumes and play suits instead of bathing costumes, Mr Oscar Meinhardt who has been executive producer of the "Miss Universe" spectacle, announced here today.

This follows a difference of opinion between Mr Meinhardt and a swimsuit company which owns the Miss Universe title and has been one of the show's sponsors in the past.

But Mr Meinhardt said today there was still possibility of a reconciliation and a revival of the Miss Universe pageant.

If a reconciliation does not occur, the new congress to select "Miss International Beauty" will be jointly sponsored by the city and the port of Long Beach.—Reuter.

K Will Be Crowded On U.S. Tour

Washington, Sept. 1. Nearly 100 people including 39 Russian reporters will accompany Mr Nikita Khrushchev on his United States tour this month, the State Department announced today.

Heading the list of officials in the party will be Mr Andrei Gromyko, the Soviet Foreign Minister, and his wife. The State Department issued a list of 19 other senior officials who will accompany the Prime Minister.

They included Mr V. P. Yelyutin, Minister of higher and secondary specialised education, Mr G. A. Zhukov, chairman of the state committee for cultural relations with foreign countries, and Mr V. S. Yemelyanov, chief of the main administration for the use of atomic energy.

The Soviet correspondents will add to the State Department's headaches in arranging press coverage. Already some 250 correspondents representing American, British and other countries' news organisations have applied for space on the one press plane which will accompany Mr Khrushchev on his nationwide tour. The plane has only 80 seats.—Reuter.

Piracy

San Pedro, Calif., Sept. 1. R. E. Goodwin told police today that a thief in a cabin cruiser slid alongside his wharf while he was talking to a friend, scooped $180 worth of tools, and roared away across Los Angeles harbour.—UPI.

Bid To Curb Teenage Violence

New York, Sept. 1. City officials considered imposing a 10 p.m. curfew for teenagers today as a means of curbing youth violence that has caused the transfer of 1,400 policemen to juvenile crime duty.

City Council majority leader Joseph P. Sharkey said he was ready to call an emergency council meeting at any hour of the day or night if he feels it is necessary to help end the violence that has taken 10 lives this year.

He said he intended to push a teenage curfew law through the Council because "kid glove methods have failed."

"It's time for drastic measures," Sharkey said. "The do-gooders have succeeded in doing nothing but knock down our city."

CURFEW

At least seven members of the 25-man Council have come out recently in favour of the curfew. Others who support the move are Tammany Hall chief Carmine De Sapio and Bernard Newman, Chairman of the New York County Republican Organisation.

Proponents of the law point out that youth curfews have been successful in reducing juvenile delinquency in Philadelphia, Detroit and Chicago. It has been suggested that New York adopt Detroit's practice of fining or gaoling parents of curfew violators.

Authorities said a curfew would cut down on after-dark "rumblings" between youth gangs, such as one broken up last night.

Police arrested 12 members of a Negro gang named "The Chameleons" who had gathered in a schoolyard with bicycles, chains, tyre chains, pipes, knives and broomstick handles to do battle with another Negro gang, "The Bishops."

Magistrate Raymond Tierney ordered the youths, ranging in age from 15 to 20 years, held in $2,500 bail on charges of disorderly conduct. "The streets of New York have become a jungle," he commented.—UPI.

Nigerian Governor Misquoted

London, Sept. 1. Sir James Robertson, Governor-General of the Federation of Nigeria, today said he was "incorrectly quoted" when asked to comment on a Ghana Times demand for an "unqualified apology" following remarks he was reported to have made at London Airport yesterday.

Sir James was yesterday quoted as saying in connection with African reaction to the French plans to explode an atom bomb in the Sahara Desert that the explosion would occur many hundreds of miles away from them but this does "not go down with a comparatively ignorant people."

Sir James, speaking from his home in Chislehurst, Kent, by telephone today, said: "I cannot remember exactly what I said. I have been 40 years in Africa and I would never have said that because it is simply not true."

The Colonial Office this afternoon issued its version of what Sir James said at London Airport. According to this version, the Governor stated: "There was a good deal of alarm about the Sahara tests and a lot of people in country districts naturally did not have a great deal about the details. The people in Nigeria were quite genuinely alarmed."—Reuter.

Saratoga, Sept. 1. The Union Finance Co., located only one block from the police station, was robbed yesterday for the third time in four years. The bandits got at least $300.—UPI.

WHITE ELEPHANT ESCORTED TO RANGOON ZOO

Rangoon, Sept. 1. An 18-month-old sacred white elephant today completed a triumphal cross-country tour on its way to the Rangoon zoo. Thousands of Buddhists convinced of the rare animal's sacred character, respectfully escorted the elephant across the city after its arrival down the Irrawaddy River by boat from Mandalay.

Rangoon's population lined the banks of the river to do homage to the baby elephant which was accompanied by its mother. City authorities who had authorised the demonstration were nevertheless displeased by the extraordinary ceremonial reminiscent of the days of the Burmese monarchy. According to Buddhist tradition a white elephant is one of the five signs of supreme power. Such an animal was considered to be the equal of the sovereign and was treated as one. Traditional elements, particularly those in the north where the elephant was found are opposed to the animal being placed in a zoo.

covered in Burma between the two world wars but it died upon arrival in Rangoon. The so-called white baby elephant is only a little lighter than the normal grey elephants but experts from Mandalay ruled it was a real white elephant.—AFP.

Cypriot Threat To Greeks

Nicosia, Sept. 1. Leaflets circulated in Nicosia old city today by the Greek Cypriot organisation KEM threatened death to the Greek Prime Minister and Foreign Minister, Mr Constantine Karamanlis and Mr Evangelos Aoroff, should they ever visit Cyprus.

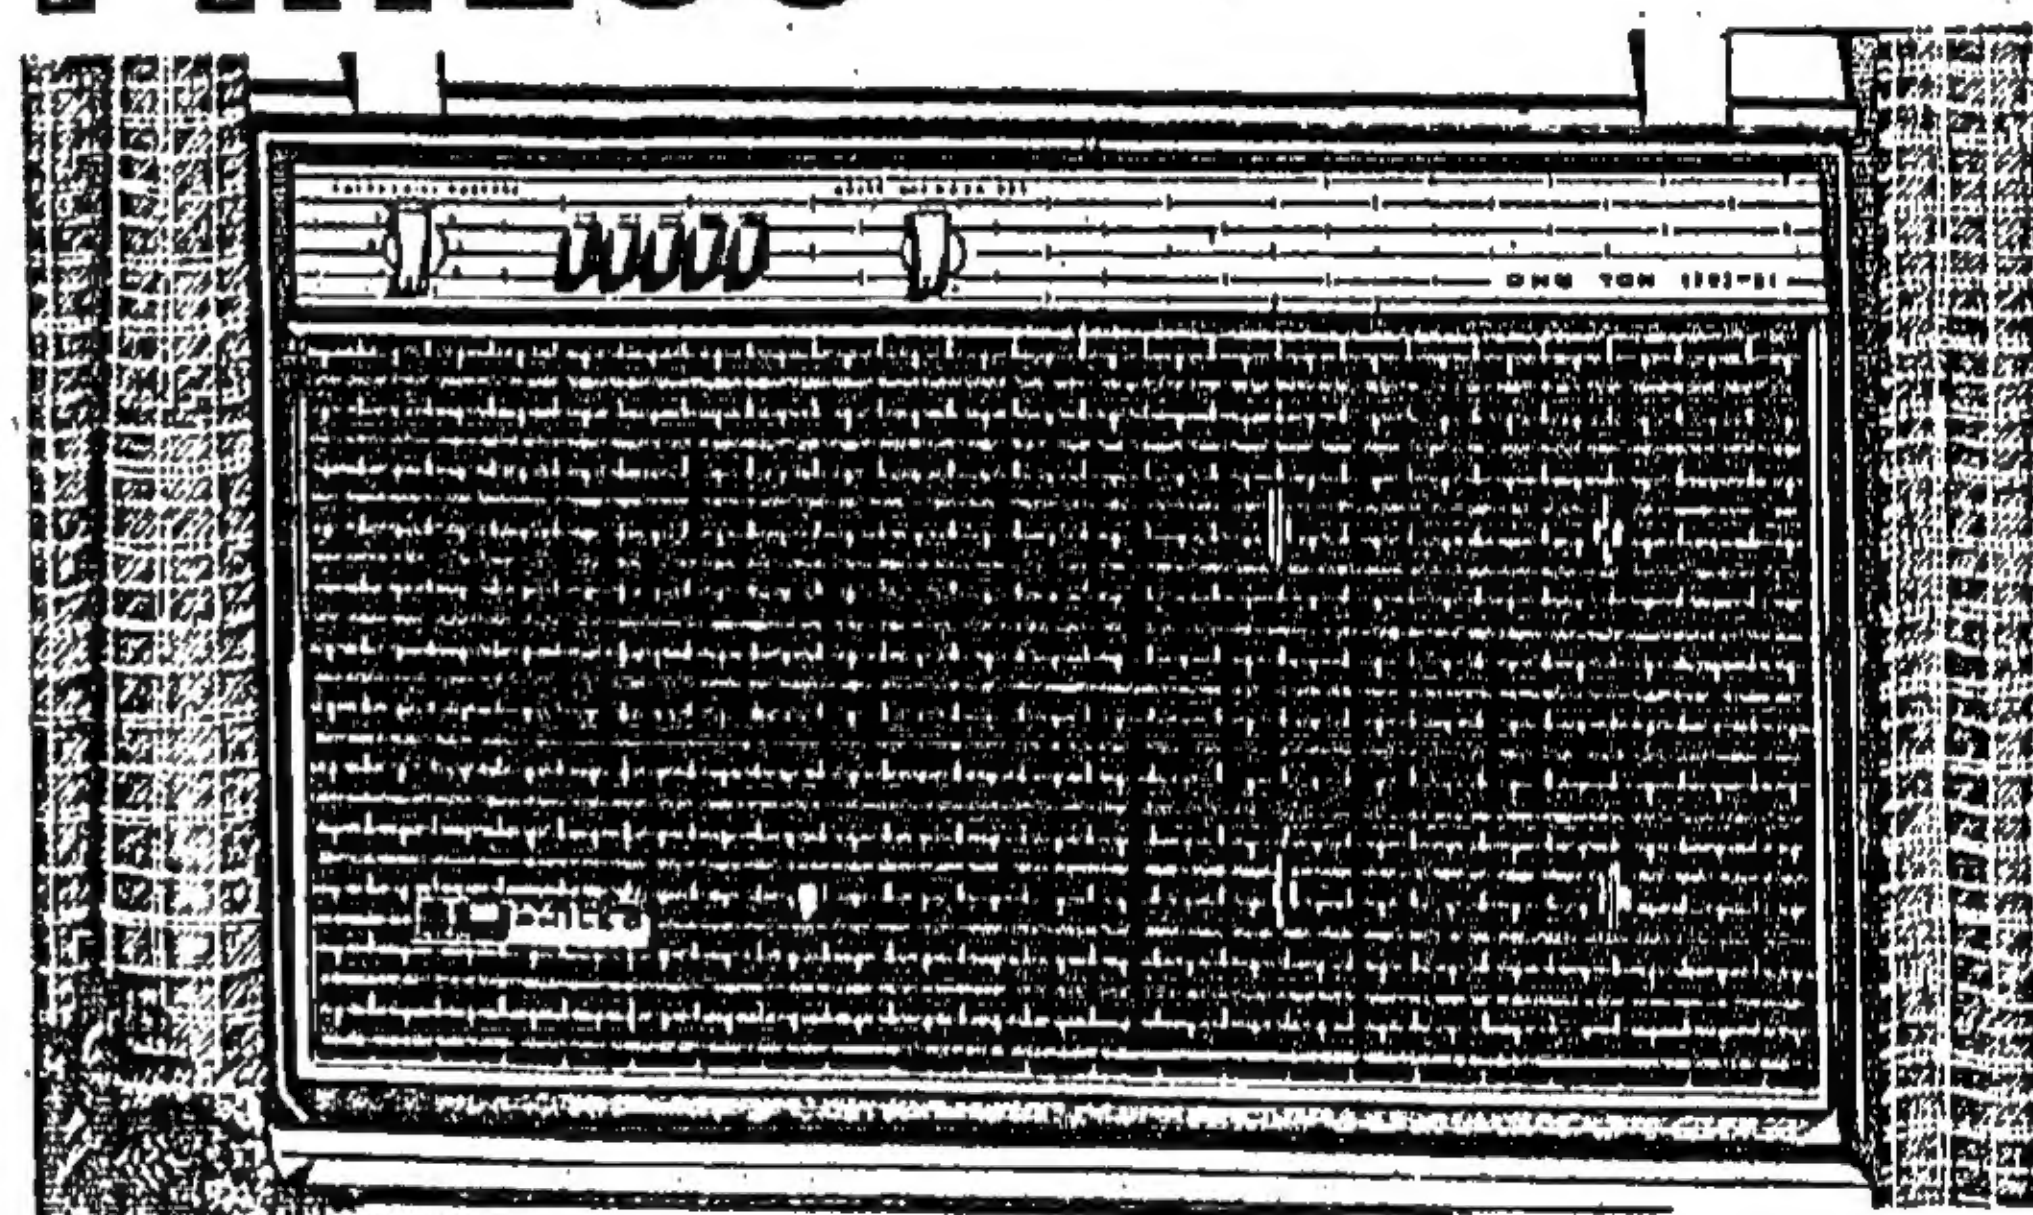

"Just as they buried the Cyprus question, we shall bury them here," the leaflets declared. The leaflets, the third series distributed by KEM in the past three weeks, appealed to Archbishop Makarios to "have nothing to do with these funeral undertakers of the Cyprus question and never deviate from the broad road of national dignity."—Reuter.

In 1953 the mother had already given birth to a white elephant but it was then in the hands of Communist rebels who left it to die.

The young elephant will occupy the place in the zoo which was formerly assigned to the last white elephant of the Burmese monarchy and which the British transferred to Rangoon after occupying the royal capital of Mandalay in 1885. Since then only one white elephant has been discovered.

$2 MILLION INHERITANCE MAY BE A JOKE

Pittsburgh, Sept. 1. Mrs. Felice Macerelli, who had planned to leave for Scotland today to settle a $2 million estate reportedly left her by an uncle, learned just in time that she may be the victim of a "monstrous joke."

Attorney Howard R. Eulenstein said today that Mrs. Macerelli, 40, who is suffering from cancer and has been given one year to live, changed her plans and would "await further word on the inheritance."

The Pittsburgh woman had received telegrams informing her that she was the sole heir to the estate of an uncle, John Lennon, a ship designer, who worked on the Queen Mary. She had just seen her uncle during a visit to Scotland in 1924. Her uncle had visited her here several times, most recently in 1952.

Eulenstein said a preliminary investigation has shown that the "whole affair may be a monstrous joke." He said he was checking into the origin of the telegrams. "We feel that these telegrams originated in Pittsburgh," he said.—UPI.

THE WORLD

By PETER FAIRLEY

AFTER three years of secret work, two British engineers have built a revolutionary short-wave radio transmitter. It can send several messages at once, transmit each one on several different frequencies, and continue transmitting them even if a valve breaks down.

Previous short-wave sets have only been able to send messages on one frequency. To use a different one—when, say, atmospheric conditions change—the operator has had to move tuning controls on the amplifier.

The new transmitter has no tuning controls. It amplifies all the chosen frequencies automatically at the same time. Its secret is a device called a "distributed amplifier." Normal radio sets rely on four or five large valves. This one distributes the "load" over many valves, so that if one fails, only a small amount of amplification is lost.

ATOM SEEDS

BRITISH seed firms are looking into the possibility of putting "atom-blasted" seeds on the home market. Tests are now in progress at the Wantage Irradiation Laboratories to see what effect atomic radiation has on some types of fruit and flower seed, and grass.

These seeds are now on sale to the public in America. And they are producing remarkable results. Tomato plants have produced as many as 40 sweet, deep-red tomatoes. If strange, elongated shape. Marigolds, usually growing upright, have turned into sweet-scented flowering vines. Petunias have changed colour and shape. The sweet corn has flourished with eight ears per stalk.

The U.S. "atom-blasted" varieties are the idea of Dr. C. J. Speer, a Tennessee dental surgeon at the Oak Ridge atomic energy establishment. He was having trouble on his private farm with hillside crops which grew poorly because rain washed away the fertilizer. He believed radiation might make seeds tougher and more fruitful. He built a concrete block-house on the hill, put in a pellet of radio-active cobalt, and loaded the seeds on trays for their "dose."

Now thousands of American gardeners are experimenting with the varieties and reporting findings to Dr. Speer. The changes—which could eventually play a major part in easing the world's growing food problems—take several years to show full effect.

The Duchess tells Yves
—'How stunning!'

Sam White's Paris Newsletter

Paris. It came as something of a surprise to me to see the Duke and Duchess of Windsor in Paris at this strictly unfashionable time of the year.

In previous years their summer months have been spent in trips to Italy, Salzburg and the Tyrol alternating with cruises in the Mediterranean.

New pattern

Their presence here at this time of the year seems to underline their increasing isolation from large sections of French and international society, which once went to great trouble in their efforts to entertain the Windsors.

For the Duke this new pattern of life fits in increasingly with his own inclinations, but for the Duchess it might be a different story.

They both looked well when I saw them a few days ago at a left bank restaurant which has recently become fashionable.

The Duchess, I thought, did a splendid thing that evening. Shortly after she and the Duke were seated, Yves St. Laurent, the young man who wears the heavy mantle of Dior, entered the restaurant. He passed to greet the Duchess.

The entire room, crowded with buyers, fashion writers, models and dress designers here for the winter collections, held its breath to catch every word of this chance public encounter between one of the world's best-dressed women and this year's most despised designer.

In a voice which ricocheted round the room like a bullet, the Duchess said to St. Laurent: "I thought your collection was stunning."

This Windsor has now left Paris. They have gone to Biarritz—the second time in two years—for a stay at that resort's leading hotel.

There the Duke will work on his new book which is devoted to men's clothes. He is being assisted by Patrick Kinross.

★ INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE: the principal cafe in the village of Marcoule, where Franco's Harwell is located, has changed its name and now calls itself the Atom Bar. Immediately beneath the name it advertises "Provencal Specialties."

Wasteland

I wish some Tin Pan Alley bard would write a song entitled "I hate Paris in the Autumn." There are many among us, of that small, hardy bunch who survive an August in Paris, who would sing such a song with heart-rending feeling.

At this time of the year the city is a wasteland of shuttered shops and restaurants, but it is not so lonely as it seems. It is the stark problems of survival.

How to get a shirt laundered becomes, under the circumstances of this strange, ghost-like existence, almost more important than the little matter of meals.

To find a butcher involves a 15 minute cruise around the city, and as for plumbers or electricians, their absence has driven many a despairing flat dweller to a hotel room.

As though to add a final ironic twist to this situation, the

SUZY'S SISTER,
TALL GIRLS AND SHORT MEN...

HAVING listed the disadvantages of Paris now, here is one advantage.

With the fashion shows on, one suddenly finds oneself minus clean shirt, of course—living in a dizzy world of which the female part seems to consist entirely of short-skirted women with swirly-slick figures, who are, in fact, the world's top fashion models.

This leads to curious social occasions in which they not only outnumber the men present but are considerably taller as well.

This was the situation at a party given recently by Dorian Leigh, the famous ex-model and sister of Suzy Parker, who now runs a model agency here. The party was to introduce her friends to her husband, a Paris obstetrician whom she married two months ago.

Most of the men she could find for the party at this time of the year were New York fashion buyers, who seem to be a race of uniformly short stature.

The splendidly willowy fashion models soared above them like beanstalks. In many cases men had to stand on tip-toe to offer a girl a drink.

It was a situation in which any man touching six feet fell at a clear advantage.

police, in anticipation of a deserted city have abolished parking time limits.

What they did not reckon with was the influx of foreign cars. The result is the paradoxical situation of a seemingly deserted city in which parking space is harder to find than ever before.

A split

Despite fervent denials, I forecast a split in the fashion house of Lanvin-Castillo, which has had such noteworthy success with its collection this summer, a year.

He has long wanted to start a house of his own. Now, with a marriage of his brains and Miss Hutton's patronage, I forecast that he will do so.

Holiday isle

I spent my holiday on a small French island once occupied by Nelson's sailors, and from which they bombarded the port of La Rochelle opposite.

The island is greatly favoured by Paris industrial workers who can indulge in their favourite sport of fishing.

It was a splendid sight to see them indulge in their other favourite sport of good eating, with grilled lobsters at six shillings, oysters about tennepence a dozen, and a delicious local white wine about threepence a glass.

It was less pleasing to find that, a year after de Gaulle's return to power, the Communist newspaper L'Humanite could still be bought in the island.

It was launched—for an intended short trip—by Geoffrey Roland and his brother Tony at Stretford (Lancs), an air current carried it 500 ft. up, and it was last seen heading for the Pennines.

Just Fancy That!

TIMMY THE TRACTOR took off on his own the other day while Farmer Bob Carter went for a cup of tea in his farmhouse at Mulben, Banffshire.

The tractor trundled across two fields, knocked down fences, charged cattle and sheep, and crashed into a ditch.

Total value: 8d. But he was fined £1 at Ripley, Derbyshire, for theft, because "anything a refuse-man collects belongs to the council."

THE "cowboy" behind the bar of the Fusiliers Arms in Salford, Lancashire, was the licensee, Mr. John Cairns, who had been taking part in a Western-style show.

He did not bother to change when he returned to his job. His gun was still holstered on his hip—for a while.

It caught the eye of Dennis Ryan, aged 24, of Russell Street, Salford, and as Mr. Cairns drew pints, Ryan drew the gun without Mr. Cairns knowing.

But Ryan was seen and followed by a woman. At Salford he was given an absolute discharge with 38s. costs for stealing the gun and four blank rounds.

THE FIRST FLIGHT TO PARIS MISSED
THE BOAT

ON a dull, overcast August morning, 40 years ago, the first passenger ever to fly on a scheduled international air service was sick in his hat. His name: George Stevenson-Reece. The pilot who flew him was a genial, burly fellow called Bill Lawford.

The date was August 25, in that remarkable year 1919, when Alcock and Brown flew the Atlantic, Ross and Keith Smith flew from Britain to Australia, Winston Churchill was Air Minister with Trenchard as Chief of Staff.

BOMBER

The cross-Channel flight, which put Britain first as an international airline operator, was made in a converted bomber, a DH 4A, a simple aircraft, built of ash and spruce braced with steel wire and covered with linen fabric.

Riddled in 1914-18 war flying kit in a makeshift cabin, Stevenson-Reece went on record, in the Evening Standard with a first account by an airline passenger of the century of arrival: With almost a start suddenly the mist clears and houses begin to thicken. The cockpit of Le Bourget stretches in front and we begin to descend. Yes, Paris was away on the right but even now it is scarcely visible as a whole owing to the fog.

I search in vain for the Eiffel Tower and the Sacre Coeur and try to persuade myself that I like "bunking" as we call it, downwards to arrive just two hours 20 minutes after leaving Hounslow.

Before he died in 1955, Bill Lawford, the pilot, recollected this inaugural flight. "We had no wireless to help us, no blind flying instruments, no flight engineers, no parachutes or brolies and only one engine that had had a lot of war use."

"Anyway, hedginghopping over the old familiar route, I soon picked up the coast. Then came some wave-skinning which wasn't so funny in the sea mist. 'Careful! What's that ahead—put the old bus up sharp, that's the Vame lightship, that was—missed it by a few feet, and the sea doesn't look at all matey!'"

Of that company of pioneer pilots, Lawford said: "they flew old aeroplanes with single engines of doubtful reliability. Yet they established a record regularity which has scarcely been beaten with all our vastly improved multi-engine aircraft."

The company employing him which promoted the first regular service, was Aircraft Transport and Travel Ltd, founded by a shrewd Edwardian-looking businessman, George Holt Thomas.

Holt Thomas was not alone in the field. There was Frederick Handley Page whose organisation at Criccieth had been founded in 1908. His Handley Page Transport Ltd, started regular operations on the London-Paris route on September 2, 1919, with seven passengers and a coach. The pilot on that occasion was Sholto Douglas, now Lord Douglas of Kirtleside, head of BEA, who recalls that he "went to Handley Page, asked for a job, and was given £500 a year as chief pilot."

By the end of that year, the Instone Air Line had also started and there were thus three British firms running competitive scheduled services across the Channel, with two French rivals and KLM.

But there was one aspect of travel between London and Paris which was both faster and less hazardous to the air passenger of 40 years ago—the journey between the city terminals and the point of take-off. Just a comfortable drive of 30 or 40 minutes.

Warm In A Flash

To flame a dish of hot food, you needn't preheat alcoholic beverages. The heat of the food will warm the liquid enough, and a lighted kitchen match touched quickly to the surface of the alcohol will ignite it.

Drip-dry Hint

When laundering a drip-dry jacket on the honeymoon, stuff the sleeves with cotton hand towels while it dries. The sleeves will hold their shape and will dry faster.

Engagement Rings

Anyone who says engagement rings are old-fashioned is more right than he knows. They date back to caveman days. The first rings were plaited grass or rushes, put around the chosen bride's ankles or wrists, later around her finger.

A Bride Should Remember
The volume of beaten egg whites is increased when eggs are at room temperature.

STORIES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

How Ice Skating Began

—Mr. Punch Tells Knarf He Invented It Himself—

By MAX TRELL

It had been cold for several days. From the frozen pond at the foot of the hill came shouting and laughing as the ice skaters went skimming around. The sun shone. The wind blew. Checks and noses were red. Everyone had a wonderful time.

"Mr. Punch," said Knarf, the Shadow Boy with the Turned About Name, as he came into Mr. Punch's room one afternoon, "why are you standing by that window? You've been there since early this morning."

Fun On Ice

"I'm watching the people having fun on the ice," said Mr. Punch. From the window, he could see the people skating on the pond.

"They look lovely," said Mr. Punch. "I'm glad I did it for them!"

"Did it for them?" said Knarf. In a puzzled voice. "What did you do for them?"

"Invented ice skating," said Mr. Punch.

"You invented ice skating?" Knarf shouted in astonishment. Mr. Punch smiled and nodded.

Who Was It?

"But you couldn't have!" cried Knarf.

"My dear boy," said Mr. Punch, "somebody invented ice skating."

skating. Can you tell me who it was?"

"I don't know who it was," said Knarf.

"There, you see," said Mr. Punch. "I'll tell you who it was. It was me."

Knarf kept saying that Mr. Punch couldn't have been the one who invented ice skating. However, Mr. Punch hardly seemed to hear any of this. He smiled more and more.

"I'm glad I did it," he said again. "It happened on a day just like this. I was a young boy then. All my friends had nice new sleds. I had a sled, too, only it was broken. How I envied the other children! But when I looked at my broken sled, I knew that I would never be able to go sliding down the hill again."

"What was broken about your sled?" Knarf asked Mr. Punch.

"The runners were broken," said Mr. Punch. "They were broken in little pieces. But all of a sudden I had a wonderful idea."

"But I don't see what a broken sled had to do with inventing ice skating!" said Knarf.

"Ah," said Mr. Punch, "you don't understand. I took two of those broken runners from my sled and nailed them onto my shoes. They're like standing on a sled. But I didn't want to go sliding down a hill on my shoes! I wanted a nice, flat level place. So I went down to the frozen pond. It was wonderful!"

Knarf looked at Mr. Punch. "You mean that you skated on the pieces of your broken sled?"

The First One

"That's right," said Mr. Punch. "That's how I invented ice skating. And I let you see ever tell you that I didn't. I'm the one who thought of it first!"

Mr. Punch was still standing by the window, watching the skaters on the pond as Knarf walked out of the room.

"I'm glad I invented it for them," Mr. Punch was still saying to himself.

But Knarf only wondered whether he did or he didn't.

Knarf asked Punch why he was standing by the window.

Rupert and the Outlaws—15

As the Chief speaks more men arrive. "We can't talk of our plans with that little object listening," decides the Chief. "Take him and lock him up." One of the others grabs Rupert and, pushing him into a low shed, hidden in the bushes, bolts the door on the outside. In the darkness Rupert gradually finds that the small space is partly filled with mysterious sacks and bundles. The rough floor is covered with straw and bracken. "Who are these men?" he whispers. "Why are they doing this to me?"

Make Your Food Look Interesting

"IT'S not only the high cost and fine quality of food, the skilful seasoning or the way it is cooked that matters. To produce a successful meal, the food must look appetising."

"For example, Madame, in arranging cold cuts and relishes for luncheon, I would choose a very large platter," observed the Chef.

"I would cover two-thirds with well-chilled, thin sliced cold cuts such as liverwurst and ham bologna, with the cellulose casing removed."

FOLD SLICES
 "Fold over the slices to make half-moons. Use liverwurst for the centre, garnish with parsley. Place the folds of ham bologna to fill in the section on each side. Separate with rolls of cervelat filled with stuffed olives."

"Circle the remaining third of the platter with sliced tomato and fill in with short stalks of celery stuffed with cream cheese. Garnish with crisp radishes. Serve with a choice of pickle-relish, horseradish, mustard and table mustard blended with ketchup and spooned in paper soufflé cups. Arrange dark and light bread slices for colour contrast on a bread tray and serve coffee and assorted fresh fruits."

"The results will be a beautiful study in colour and arrangement."

Sauce Piquante: Combine 3 tbsps. undiluted evaporated milk and ½ c. fine crumbled bread crumbs. Add ½ c. prepared horseradish, 1 tbsps. tomato ketchup and ¼ tsp. salt. Let stand 10 min. or longer.

Fold into ½ c. frosty-cold undiluted evaporated milk whipped stiff.

Serve at once with hot or cold braised or boiled beef, terrine or fish.

Orange Zabaglione: Beat 5 egg yolks slightly in the top of a deep 1 qt. double-boiler. Add 1 ½ c. sugar, 2 tsp. grated orange rind, 1 tbsps. lemon or lime juice and ¾ c. Florida orange juice. Cook and beat over boiling water until thick and fluffy like whipped cream. Remove from the hot water at once. Beat 2 egg whites until stiff; beat in the orange custard. Chill. Serve in sherbet or parfait glasses. Also nice over sliced fresh peaches.

Cooking Parmigiana: To prepare authentic veal cutlet, cut plant or fish filets "Parmigiana," which means in the style of Parma, Italy, it is traditional to use Mozzarella cheese. But this is not always available. In the test kitchen we use creamed cottage cheese instead—delicious!

Yorkshire Win County Cricket Championship

BEAT SUSSEX BY FIVE WICKETS AS SURREY DRAW WITH MIDDLESEX

London, Sept. 1.

Yorkshire won the English county cricket championship outright for the first time since 1946 when they beat Sussex by five wickets at Hove, Sussex, today.

Yorkshire's victory stopped a run of seven wins by Surrey who, though they have one match to play, were held to a draw by Middlesex at the Oval and cannot now overtake the Northerners.

The new champions finished with 204 points from 28 games. Surrey can gain only a maximum of 14 points from their remaining fixture and this would give them only 200.

Yorkshire gave one of the most fantastic exhibitions of fast scoring in recent cricket history. They were set to make 215 runs to win in 103 minutes and, finishing with a four from John Biles, they made 218 in 96 minutes.

Winning Stand

The match was virtually won for Yorkshire by the third wicket pair, Brian Stott (90) and Doug Padgett (79) who scored 141 runs in 76 minutes.

The time-table of Yorkshire's tremendous innings reads: 50 in 20 minutes, 77 in 30 minutes, 100 in 45 minutes, 150 in 63 minutes, 200 in 85 minutes, 218 in 96 minutes.

Stott, a 25-year-old left-hander, gave only one real chance during his innings. After scoring 76, he appeared to be brilliantly caught by the Nawab of Pataudi, standing on the boundary, but the young Indian player stepped over the line as he held the catch and signalled that it was a six. Stott was eventually caught by the same fielder.

End Of Surrey's Bid Surrey's reign as champions was ended in a spell of 25 minutes of inspired cricket by their Thames-side neighbours, Middlesex.

Surrey had been set to make 205 in 140 minutes, but in three 25 minutes they lost four of their best batsmen for 26 and victory was out of the question.

Middlesex, who claimed the extra half hour, had captured nine wickets for 127 with five minutes left to play, but Alec Ince and Peter Loader held out and the match was drawn.

Gloucester Beaten

Gloucestershire's hopes of being crowned in the outcome of the championship vanished completely at Worcester when after being set to make 382 in 320 minutes they were beaten by 83 runs by Worcestershire.

Opening batsmen Martin Young and Arthur Milton put on 103 in 100 minutes, but Milton was dismissed for 48 and Gloucestershire's innings became largely a one-man effort. This was by Young who was seventh out and made 130 including 15 boundaries.

NO MORE FROZEN PITCHES

Murrayfield Sets The Style By Installing An 'Electric Blanket'

Edinburgh, Sept. 1.

Bales of straw and burning braziers are no longer answer to ice and snow — the twin evils which frequently paralyse the sport in Britain.

Murrayfield—home of the Scottish international team here—has set the style for the future by installing an "electric blanket" under the pitch, a move which makes frozen pitches a thing of the past.

Over 30 miles of electric cable have been laid at a uniform depth of six inches below the turf, and whenever the temperature drops below 40 degrees Fahrenheit the pitch will warm up.

NOT THE FIRST

Murrayfield is not the first British sports ground to install an electric blanket. The pioneers were the English first division soccer club, Everton, of Liverpool.

But a reasonable playing surface is, if anything, more important to rugby than it is to soccer—and it can only be a matter of time before other rugby grounds are equipped in the same way as Murrayfield.

A total of 217 heating wires have been laid over the full length of the Murrayfield pitch at a constant spacing of 6½ inches to produce the most even heating possible. The maximum running cost is £4 15s an hour.

Murrayfield's move means that never again should a match here have to be abandoned due to snow or frost, and an 80,000 capacity crowd disappointed.

GREEN AND SNOW-FREE

Whenever blizzards sweep across Edinburgh this winter, Murrayfield will remain green and snow-free. When frosts make the earth hard, Murrayfield will keep its spring and allow players to go all out without the fear of broken bones.

One other incidental value should be a better growth of grass throughout the winter, a better turf surface and thus better rugby.—China Mail Special.

FOUR PAN-AMERICAN RECORDS SET BY U.S. WEIGHTLIFTER

Chicago, Sept. 1.

Weightlifter Clyde Emrich of Chicago set four Pan-American Games records today and won the middle heavyweight class gold medal while United States athletes were cracking records in every event en route to the finals of the swimming meeting.

Emrich, winning the fifth weightlifting gold medal for the U.S. in six events completed, pressed 297½, snatched 281, and jerked 734½ for a total of 953½ pounds, all new records. His victory gave the U.S. 27 gold medals of 31 awarded.

In swimming, the competition was so strong that in one event, the men's 400 metre freestyle, 10 athletes broke the Pan-American record and two of them failed to qualify for the finals.

In the 100 metre freestyle for women, Chris Von Saltza of California had the best time, of 1:42.4, compared to the old record of 1:47.7. Five qualifiers bettered the old mark.

Team Sports In the 100 metre backstroke for men, the old record of 1:07.1 by Frank McKinney, Indianapolis, was beaten four times, with McKinney bettering his own mark to 1:03.2.

In team sports, U.S. teams triumphed again. The basketball team beat Brazil, 9-2, to move into a tie with Mexico for first place in its pool. The unbeatn water polo team swamped West Indies Federation, 17-4, and the women's volleyball team shut out Peru, 3-0.

United States' Robert Miller won the pistol shooting phase of the modern pentathlon with a score of 191, and 920 points, to move into third place in the individual standing behind Venezuela's Milla, Brazil, who had 2,898 points.

Leslie Bleamaster of California, was second with 2,690, and Miller had 2,646. Malta was fifth in shooting and Bleamaster eighth.

As a team the U.S. won the pistol shooting with a 564 score and 2,580 points, and led in team standing after three days with 7,039 points to Brazil's 6,005.

Tennis, Yachting

Only in tennis and yachting did the U.S. topple. Of seven yachting classes, only the Finn Monotype group raced today and William McLean, San Francisco, fouled out, finishing last and running last in his group.

All U.S. men tennis players were out in the singles, and only Althea Gibson survived in women's singles. But Miss Gibson, and Grant Golden, advanced to the semi-finals in mixed mixed doubles with 6-1, 6-4 win over Nora Somaza and Roberto Aubone, Argentina.

In women's doubles Miss Gibson and Karol Fagoras moved into the finals with a 6-3, 6-2 win over Imelda Ramirez and Maria Hernandez, Mexico.

In men's doubles, both U.S. pairs lost in the semi-finals. Golden and Myron Franks were beaten 6-3, 10-8, 8-6, 6-4, 6-1 by Antonio and Gustavo Palafox, Mexico, and Jon Douglas and Mike Green were beaten by Mario Llamas and Francisco Contreras, Mexico, 6-0, 6-4, 6-4.—UPI.

Althea Gibson In Tennis Final

Chicago, Sept. 1.

Althea Gibson, former Wimbledon champion, who is playing in her first major tournament for a year, reached the women's singles final of the Pan-American Games lawn tennis tournament here today.

She beat Miss Mimi Arnold (United States) 6-1, 6-3 in the semi-finals, and will now meet Miss Yola Ramirez (Mexico) who defeated Mrs. Dorothy Knodel (United States) 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

Luis Ayala (Chile) reached the men's final, beating Jon Douglas (United States) 7-5, 6-2, 6-1.

Bob Bedard (Canada), defeated Francisco Contreras (Mexico) 6-2, 1-0, 6-3, 6-3 in the other semi-final.—Router.

Fullmer scored a 14th round knockout over Carmen Basilio last Friday to take the NBA's world middleweight title. The NBA stripped Sugar Ray Robinson of his title for failing to defend it within a certain time limit. Robinson is recognized by all other boxing organizations as the current world champion.—UPI.

The meeting is also slated to organize elimination bouts to determine a challenger for the new NBA world middleweight champion Gene Fullmer.

Olmedo, Bueno Made Top Seeds In U.S. Singles Tournament

New York, Sept. 1.

Alex Olmedo and Maria Bueno, the Wimbledon tennis champions, today were top-seeded for the U.S. national singles championships beginning on Friday at Forest Hills, New York.

Neale Fraser of Australia was seeded second in the 128-player men's division although he beat Olmedo in the Davis Cup challenge round last Friday and started while his country regained the cup.

Barry Mackay, the American Davis Cupper who lost to Fraser in Monday's final Cup match was seeded third. Rod Laver of the Australian Cup squad, finalist against Olmedo at Wimbledon, was placed fourth.

Hemantham Krishnan of India was seeded fifth, Luis Ayala of Chile sixth, Earl Buchholz of St. Louis seventh and Roy Emerson of Australia eighth.

Seedings were announced just before officials and newsmen began the lengthy process of making the draw.

WOMEN'S EVENT

The United States also was rated behind foreign stars in the 64-player women's division.

Sandra Reynolds of South Africa was seeded second and Christine Truman of England third behind Miss Bueno. Darlene Hard of California was seeded fourth.

Angela Mortimer of Britain, winner of last weekend's Essex women's title at Manchester, Massachusetts, was seeded fifth. Ann Haydon of Britain was seeded sixth. Renee Schuurman of South Africa was seventh and Sally Moore of California rounded out the women's seedings in eighth position.—UPI.

CHESS NEWS

by LEONARD BARDEN

WOMEN'S international chess is not so much dominated by the Russians, but once again a Soviet player is the challenger for the world title.

She is Kira Zvorykina, a hefty, determined, 35-year-old, who sits at the chessboard for five hours of concentration. She won an eliminating tournament after a close race with Vera Nedeljkovic a Yugoslav, who was prepared for the event by her husband, a well-known master.

It seems that marrying a chess master is not the best way for women to improve their play, for the also-rans in the tournament included Keller, of Germany, the Sorokin, of Russia, both of whom trained with their husbands.

England's Elaine Pritchard was unable to go to Bulgaria for this world tournament, although she was qualified. She has had good results against several other competitors and would probably have been a prize-winner.

INDIANS BEAT KENT BY EIGHT WICKETS

London, Sept. 1.

The Indians beat Kent at Canterbury today by eight wickets and with 38 minutes to spare. They had been left two hours in which to score 103. It was their fourth win against a county.

Contractor and Apte gave them an invigorating start against a Kent attack weakened by the absence of Halford, who was off the field with an injured Achilles tendon.

Apte lobbed an easy catch to cover off Pettiford after contributing 28 towards an opening partnership of 62 but Contractor, after Ridgway, had missed him at slip, punished all the bowling and reached his 50 in 78 minutes.

Never Recovered

Earlier, Kent had been bowled out in their second innings for 147. Resuming 27 behind, with all wickets standing, they lost Richardson and Wilson—both bow to Surendra Nath—before taking the lead, and never really recovered.

Cowdrey, missed by Muddiah at leg, slip when three, and Indians won by eight wickets. Kent—258 (Dixon 76, Borde 5-44) and secondly 147 (Dixon 32, Pheby 26, Cowdrey 23, Borde 5-5, Surendra Nath 2-31, Muddiah 2-30).

India—303 (Galekandi 116) and secondly 100 for two wickets (Contractor 51 not out).—AFP.

Killebrew Paces Nats To 7-4 Win Over Bosox

New York, Sept. 1.

Harmon Killebrew hit his 39th homer of the year today to tie with Rocky Colavito for the American League home-run lead and pace the Washington Senators to a 7-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox at Boston.

The New York Yankees defeated the Baltimore Orioles, 6-0, at Baltimore in the only other day game. Detroit was at Chicago and Kansas City at Cleveland in night games.

Camilo Pascual was rapped for 12 hits in seven innings but picked up his 13th win for the Senators with the aid of a two-inning, one-hit relief performance by Tex Clevenger.

Killebrew's homer was his first of the year at Boston's Fenway Park.

DECISIVE RUN

The Senators clinched the decision with three runs in the eighth inning. Billy Conzilio singling home the decisive run and Roy Sievers doubling home two more.

Gene Stephens had three hits and Pumpsie Green, Pete Runnels and Jackie Jensen two each for the Red Sox.

Whitely Ford and Ryno Duren combined to limit the Orioles to seven hits as Ford gained his 14th win of the year.

The Yankees scored three runs off five singles and a sacrifice fly in the first inning to hand Jerry Walker his eighth defeat against nine wins.

Duren replaced Ford after Brooks Robinson and Chico Carrasquel singled and Bill Gardner drew two straight balls to open the seventh inning and held the Orioles to one hit the rest of the way.

Rugby Win For Oxford-Cambridge In Malaya

Kuala Lumpur, Sept. 1.

The touring combined Oxford-Cambridge Universities rugby team defeated All-Malaya 23-0 in a robust match here tonight.

The visitors won by a goal, four tries and two penalty goals, but they were made to fight hard for their victory.

Their win was mainly due to their marked superiority in the division in which centre-three M. S. Phillips was outstanding.

Combined Universities led 6-0 at half time, scoring a try through B. H. Wilcock and two penalty conversions by Watts and Beame. Phillips (2), Winsor-Lewis, and F. H. Tenbos scored tries in the second half with Watts making a conversion.

The visitors' next stop is Bangkok where they will play two matches.—Router.

Boxing Gangsterism Top Priority Issue Of NBA Meeting

Toronto, Sept. 1.

A coast-to-coast programme to clean up boxing gangsterism in the United States was the top priority issue when the 40th annual meeting of the National Boxing Association opened here today.

NBA commissioner Abe Green said that one of the first targets will be to prevent "boxing gangsters" from slipping out of a State which becomes too "hot" for them into other States.

Green added that the NBA would be directed in its programme by a full report on the boxing situation in California. Once the association had this report in hand it would launch a national campaign against every aspect of the "bunking situation" including "undercover" managers.

The meeting is also slated to organize elimination bouts to determine a challenger for the new NBA world middleweight champion Gene Fullmer.

Fullmer scored a 14th round knockout over Carmen Basilio last Friday to take the NBA's world middleweight title. The NBA stripped Sugar Ray Robinson of his title for failing to defend it within a certain time limit. Robinson is recognized by all other boxing organizations as the current world champion.—UPI.

Coolie On Murder Charge

A woman testified during murder committal proceedings before Mr. A. J. Sanguinetti at Central Magistracy this morning, that the accused, Fong Yick-chung, a coolie had told her he had stabbed a man in the back.

The witness, Kwok Nei-chung, said that at about 3 p.m. on July 22 this year, the defendant had visited her at 79 Connaught Road Central.

She said he had told her he had been involved in a fight with another coolie at Central Market and had been injured by the other man. Witness said defendant also told her he had stabbed the other man in the back.

Fong is alleged to have stabbed Chan Chun-yu at Central Market on July 22. Chan died later.

ASKED FOR MONEY

Witness also said that the following day Fong had asked her for $100. She gave him the money.

Sun Chuechun testified that while he was washing down the back of the premises on July 22, he had found a knife inside an iron grill. Witness said the knife did not belong to anyone in the shop.

Witness said he gave the knife to a detective on July 28. Detective Sergeant Lai Shek-ka went to Tam Wai and arrested the defendant on July 28.

Hammer Attack

A 28-year-old coolie, Chan Chuen, of 69 Boundary Street, second floor, who pleaded guilty to assault causing grievous bodily harm was sentenced to three months' gaol by Mr. T. L. Yang at the Central Magistracy this morning.

The 41-year-old fisherman, Ho Fuk, of 21 Shek Tsai Po Street, Tai O, said he told this story because he wanted to frighten away other fishermen who fished in the area.

Captain's Guns Confiscated

Mr. T. L. Yang at Central Magistracy this morning granted a police application for the confiscation of a quantity of arms and ammunition which were deposited with the Police on March 3, 1959 by Captain P. Bolla, Master of the ss "Quiltha".

Captain Bolla left the Colony leaving no forwarding address and cannot be located, Police said.

The arms and ammunition forfeited this morning included one .45 Colt pistol, one Belgian Shotgun, 420 rounds of .45 ammunition, 21 rounds of 9 mm ammunition and two magazines.

Pope's Gift To Visiting Anglican

London, Sept. 1. Pope John recently made a gift of his personal breviary to an Anglican clergyman during a private audience in the Vatican, the Daily Telegraph reports.

Canon Donald Rue, 63-year-old Vicar of Eves, Suffolk, is quoted as describing it: "The book that I will treasure for the rest of my life."

Canon Rue saw the Pope when he was visiting Rome last June to obtain material for his friend, Dr. Norman Sykes, Dean of Winchester, official biographer of the late Dr. Bell, Anglican Bishop of Chichester.

ASTONISHED

Canon Rue is quoted as saying: "The Pope astonished me when I showed him my Breviary Romanum at the end of the audience."

"He noticed its worn appearance and, after apologising for his own white breviary not being too new, told the attendant monk that he would like to give it to me."

The Pope had been using the breviary since 1957, the report said.—China Mail Special.

Hold-Up Story Gets Man 3 Months' Gaol

A fisherman who falsely claimed he had been held up and robbed by other fishermen was sentenced to three months' gaol by Mr. T. L. Yang at the Central Magistracy this morning for causing public mischief.

The 41-year-old fisherman, Ho Fuk, of 21 Shek Tsai Po Street, Tai O, said he told this story because he wanted to frighten away other fishermen who fished in the area.

Compensation For Tenants

Compensation totalling $15,050 was awarded to 30 co-tenants in an application by Mrs. Lam Ng Sui-egg for expropriation for 250 Castle Peak Road by the Tenancy Tribunal this morning.

The new building to replace the existing structure will have six storeys.

Leaving Today

The Rev. J. C. L. Wong, assistant Bishop of Borneo designated, and Mrs. Wong, will be leaving for Jesselton in the steamer Changie tomorrow at 9 a.m.

Mr. Wong was formerly Vicar of the Church of the Good Shepherd in Kowloon.

Pictured at Whipsnade Zoo is the young calf born to East African giraffe, Margie. Its value is estimated at £1,500.

Foster Parents Plan To Begin In Hongkong

By A CHINA MAIL REPORTER

Mr. George W. Ross, former USIS official in Southeast Asia, arrived yesterday to start up the work of Foster Parents Plan Incorporated in Hongkong.

Mr. Ross told the China Mail this morning that the organization was non-commercial and aimed to put children in touch with possible sponsors in the United States.

He said the organization would help them pay certain expenses for them and generally take an interest in their welfare.

Mr. Ross said particular attention would be paid to refugee families here.

He will be here two years. Mr. Ross said the Plan was operating in Italy, Greece, France, Belgium, Germany, Korea and Vietnam. It also operated in England and the Netherlands after the war but had since closed down because there was no more work there.

Mr. Ross said that strong personal relationships had developed between child and sponsor in other parts of the world through the Plan.

Mr. Ross, who is accompanied by his wife, told the China Mail that he had spent seven years in Southeast Asia before taking up his present post. He had served in Indonesia and Malaya and had also visited Hongkong.

Paper Asks For Funds To Cover Mr K's Visit

London, Sept. 2. The Daily Worker today announced it is sending its news editor to cover Mr. Nikita Khrushchev's visit to the United States and appealed to its readers for £700 to meet the expense involved.

This Communist newspaper's front-page announcement was headlined "the story of the century."

It described the Soviet Prime Minister's impending visit to the United States as "the most important international event since the end of the war."

The newspaper said it was not an easy decision to send its news editor, Mr. Frank Gulliet, to report on Mr. Khrushchev's visit because "our financial position is grim."

COST—£700

The Daily Worker continued: "The cost of the trip and the cables will amount to something like £700."

"But, as the paper which, more than any other in Britain, has campaigned for peace, and created a climate in which the Khrushchev visit has become possible, we must be there."

"Organise a special 'Khrushchev Visit' collection in factory, office or street. Run a raffle or jumble sale. Help us to buy Frank Gulliet's ticket and pay for the cables in which he will tell Daily Worker readers the story of the century."—Reuter.

Checking Security

Washington, Sept. 2. The head of Russia's secret police, Maj. Gen. Nikolai S. Zhukovskiy, is in the United States checking security arrangements for the visit of Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Official sources said today that Gen. Zhukovskiy and a top aide are visiting the various cities where Mr. Khrushchev will stop and checking the routes along which he will travel during his 12-day tour beginning September 15.—UPI.

SALESMAN TELLS OF JADE BARGAINING Receiving Case In Central

A young salesman this morning identified in court two men accused of receiving 15 stolen pieces of jade worth about $6,000, as the two men who came to Chow Tai Fook Jewellery shop, Kowloon and offered to sell 15 pieces of jade.

The men appeared before Mr. E. Corbally at Central Magistracy.

Erick M. Law, 24, of 341 Nathan Road, was testifying against two Iranians, Zaynol Vayshinsky, 39, and Vova Vayshinsky, 25, who denied receiving 15 stolen pieces of jade on August 14.

Witness further said that on August 20 and 21, he went to the Central police station for identification parades and there he pointed out the first and second accused as the two men who sold him the 15 pieces of jade.

FOREIGNERS

"On August 14 at about 5 p.m. two foreigners came to my counter," witness said, "and I could recognise the second accused as one of them as he was the one who had poach-marks on his face."

"Second accused, the one who had a bluish-brown, asked me if I bought jade," witness continued, "and I replied yes."

"He then produced a paper packet from under his shirt, took out an oval shaped jade and showed it to me."

Witness said first accused asked him if he bought jade according to weight or size, and then asked him to examine the jade.

"He asked $900 for the jade, and I asked him about the other pieces which were in the packet," witness added, "and I was handed the packet which contained 14 other pieces of jade."

"I put them on a plastic tray and examined them," witness said, "and found one small piece was shaped like a heart and two others were marquis-shaped. The rest were oval in shape."

EXAMINED

"The first accused offered me $3,900, and not wanting to take the responsibility, I showed the jade to a fellow salesman called Lo Mun who went outside the shop to examine them."

"Several other salesmen joined in, and we all agreed that the price should be $2,550," witness said, "and I went to both accused and told them that I was willing to buy them for $2,000."

"The first accused refused, saying he brought them from Singapore, and offered to sell at $3,000."

"Finally, first and second accused agreed to sell them for $2,550 and witness said he locked the jade in a drawer under the counter and went over to the cashier and took out $2,550 in four $500, five $100, and five $10 bills."

EITHER

Witness said he asked both accused who should receive the money, and second accused said, "Either of us will do."

Witness said he then handed to first accused.

On August 19, two men identifying themselves as detectives came to the shop and showed witness a piece of paper on which were drawn several shapes of jade. He was asked if he had bought any and he showed them seven of the 15 pieces of jade.

Mr. R. W. S. Winter, instructed by Mr. J. M. D'Almada Remedios, is representing accused.

Inspector R. L. Russell, assisted by Detective Inspector Ko Po-kwan, is prosecuting.

Hearing continues this afternoon.

British Pressmen Patch Up Quarrel With Mr Hagerty

London, Sept. 1.

British journalists today patched up their quarrel with the Anglo-American briefing officers to whom they had earlier complained that insufficient serious news was being given about President Eisenhower's talks here.

Mr. Hugh Piller, political correspondent of the Daily Herald, who had led the complaints against the briefing officers, had a special word for Mr. James Hagerty, the President's chief spokesman.

Describing himself as "the chief trouble maker," he expressed his thanks to Mr. Hagerty for the help he has given the British press.

LAUGHTER

After saying he hoped Mr. Hagerty would often come back to Britain, Mr. Piller raised a laugh by saying, "personally I wish you the very best of luck in France," and said his own French was not very good.

"My French is not any better than yours but I can get into trouble in any language," Mr. Hagerty replied amid laughter.

Earlier speaking for himself and Mr. Andrew Berding, State Department spokesman, Mr. Hagerty said: "We have really enjoyed this meeting. There have been times when I wish I was not sitting here."

He thanked the pressmen for their co-operation and understanding "despite a few rough spots."

At one stage of the conference Mr. Harold Evans, Mr. Macdonald's spokesman, chimed in to say "I personally am quite happy as long as you are not actually throwing things."—Reuter.

One Too Many In Space

London, Sept. 1.

The Soviet Union may have carried out an important space experiment about mid-August, delegates to the Astronautic Conference currently taking place here said today.

The supposition was based on the fact that an unidentified object had been discovered in outer space, the delegates said.

Since the object could not be identified, many theories have been put forward on its nature. Well-informed circles presumed it was of Soviet origin and that it had been launched into space in mid-August.

The Western world's observation and tracking stations network was on an alert footing between August 7 and August 14 when three American satellites were launched.

When the scientists counted the number of man-made bodies revolving in space, they found one too many.—APF.
